Haunted Halls: Rosebud Academy

Special note about the series order: April's Ghosts can stand alone. It takes place prior to the rest of the trilogy, but it features a different main character.

Luminous Lands

Special note about the Luminous Lands reading order: "The Scorpion's Daughter" and The Scorpion's Lullaby are set in the same world and there are some overlapping characters. Chronologically, Daughter takes place many years prior to Lullaby. However, Lullaby was written first. This situation is similar with "Tales of Wind and Wolves" and Tales of Sand and Stars. Wind and Wolves takes place a few weeks before Sand and Stars, but it was written after Sand and Stars. I don't believe enjoyment would be diminished by reading any of these four books out of order. The fifth, Tales of Dunes and Dragons, features Inez, the main character from Wind and Wolves, and it would probably be best to read Wind and Wolves prior to Dunes and Dragons.
